PHOTO SCAVENGER HUNT FOOD HUNTS

Food hunts encourage your scavengers to look closely at the foods offered in their area. You can include everything from fresh food to restaurants who are willing to participate.

Food of Many Colors

Take pictures from as many different colored fruits and vegetables as you can find. Be sure you know what each is called. You might even want to provide a list of fresh produce for your scavengers to find. Be sure to include a few they don't know.

Foraging

What kinds of edible foods grow naturally around you? Provide sketches or descriptions of plants, berries and other items for your scavengers to find and photograph. They'll be learning about the flora as well as scavenging.

Non-Edibles

Provide a list of food and let your scavengers find examples of non-edible versions. For example, a stuffed bunny holding a stuffed carrot or a painting of a tomato instead of the real thing.

Restaurant Fun

You can use the food or menus for this scavenger hunt. You can ask for healthy choices from a variety of restaurants, top selling dishes, help out by serving food or even taking pictures of patrons. You could ask your scavengers to find the best food in town by visiting a variety of restaurants and having the patrons rate the food they have by raising up fingers (1-5) and photographing them. Make sure you have permission from the restaurants as they may not want you taking photos.

Root Vegetables

Take pictures of root vegetables only. Provide a list for your scavengers.

Sweet It Is

Desserts might be anything from fruits to cheesecake. Take photos of all your favorite desserts.
